Strategic Marketing

Module description

This module focuses on theoretical concepts and issues of marketing and of international marketing strategy and their application for practice by businesses. The module is structured along three key themes:

- Marketing concept and market orientation which provides students with an overview, discussion and analysis of the marketing function and marketing approaches with an aim to strengthen the student's context familiarity;
- International marketing strategy which delineates the purpose of a strategic approach, its key features, types of market entry strategies and their relevance for new ventures and small businesses;
- Marketing planning and control processes which enables students to build an appreciation of decision making processes, specific issues in varied firm contexts and the organisational challenges encountered in developing an international marketing strategy.

This module aims to:

- Help students develop a critical awareness of general marketing principles and practices and of the facets of international marketing strategy and planning, its role and importance as an element of strategic management, and the implications of international marketing strategy and planning for entrepreneurial activity
